Language

Parlez-vous francaise? Hablo usted Espanole. America est patria nostra. . . . Lux et veritas.

As travel abroad and business communications between foreign lands becomes more and more prevalent, the emphasis on foreign languages becomes greater. In fact, many careers require a knowledge of another language. Then, too, as the student learns a basic language, his understanding of English is enhanced greatly.

Study of Latin disproves the theory that it is a dead language, and French makes one fluent in another very-much-alive language. Under the guidance of Mrs. Winkel, students make tape recordings, do crossword puzzles, and read stories in these classes.

This year Spanish was added to the L.H.S. curriculum giving the students a choice of three languages—Latin, French, and Spanish. Mr. Larmer instructs the pupils about Spain itself as well as teaching them the principles of the language.

Roger, Nancy, and Don bring American literature to life in the classroom.

"Would my topic sentence sound better at the end of this paragraph?" "What can I use for my final speech?" "Will someone please write a headline for this story!"

Similar pleas can be heard coming from the English department classes every day. English, speech, and journalism alike present problems to be met by all. The library, another division of the English department, often furnishes material to help solve various problems.

A mixture of direct objects, adjectives, literature, authors, dates to remember, 500-word themes, term papers, poetry, and book reports—that's English. Speech teaches students how to put a good talk together. Furthermore, it constitutes panel discussions, hours of work at the library, and those dreaded impromptues. Journalism class gives students practice and guidance in writing good newspaper-type articles; second-year students produce the paper and the yearbook. A chaos of layout material, pictures, blue pencils, headlines, and picture schedules meets students each day.

Students and teachers work together to imbed proper English usage, a rich background of literature, and clear, effective writing habits in the minds of tomorrow's leaders.

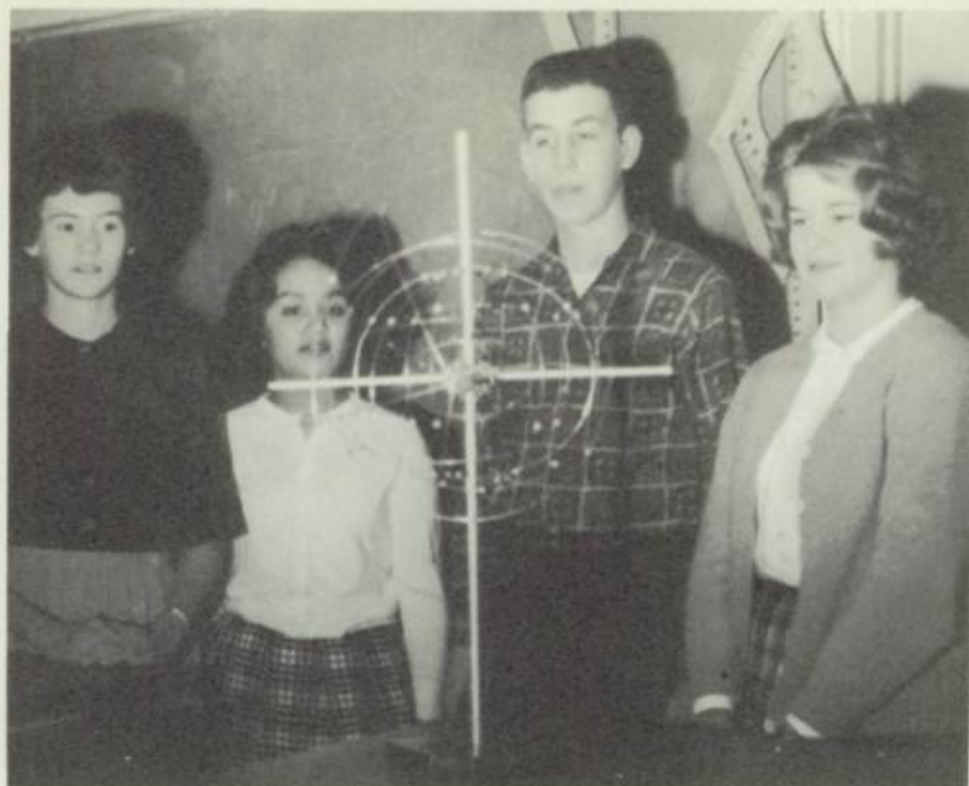

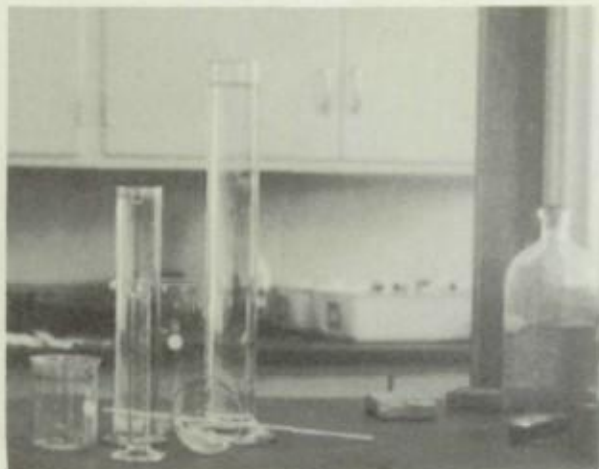

The library, essential to students, is kept in working order by student librarians, as Norma Jean and Donna.

Practical application of paper make-up constitutes part of advanced journalism.

From amidst test tubes, microscopes, dissecting instruments, and electrosopes will emerge the nation's scientists, chemists, doctors, physicists, and biologists. Students of L.H.S. have ample opportunities to discover which, if any, of these fields offer intrigue and excitement to them.

Classroom study is supplemented in most of the science courses by laboratory experiments under teacher supervision. Movies often add to the course, giving the student the advantage of being able to see things he has studied, rather than picturing them only in his mind.

Students, for the most part, are impressed by the more colorful, spectacular phenomena; students who search beneath the surface and find many unanswerable questions find the real joy and challenge of science.

math

From everyday math problems to  $A = \frac{1}{2}h(B+b)$  to  $x = \frac{7}{8} (r!-s!)$  stretches a road of interest to some students of boredom to others. No matter which it is, a minimum of math is essential to everyone, since numbers are dealt with in day to day life in any profession.

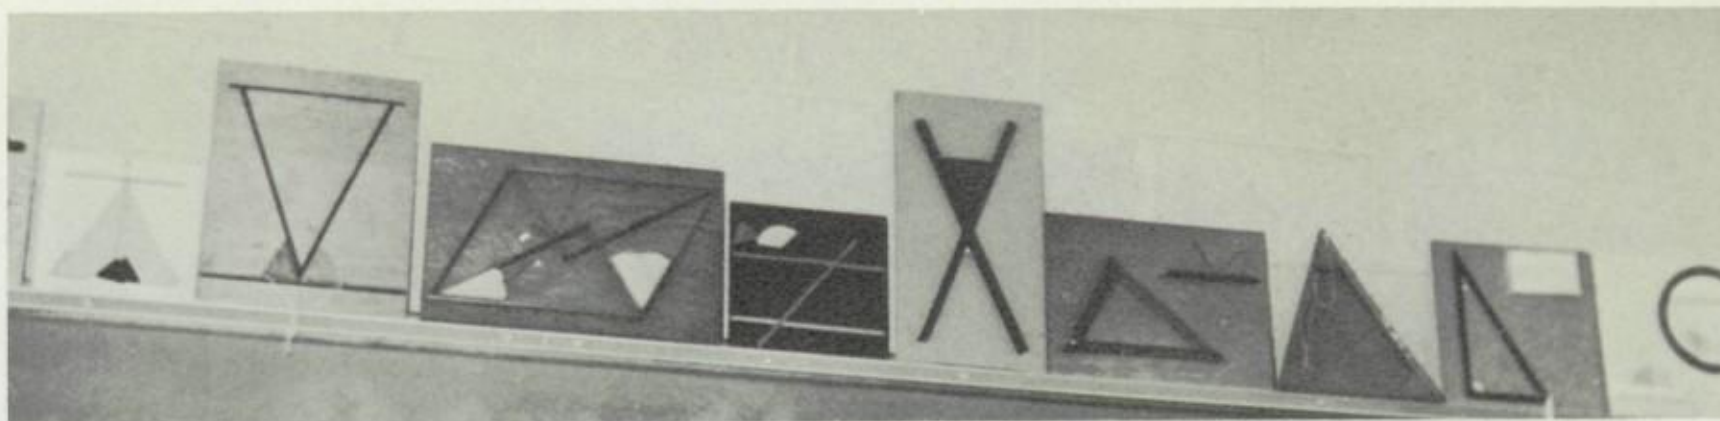

General math, geometry, and refresher math classes serve to polish basic skills, master practical everyday applications, and review techniques learned throughout the student's school days. Individuals interested in careers of science, math, or business find the more specialized forms of math, as advanced algebra, trigonometry and solid geometry, and business math to their liking.

Besides providing a solid foundation for specialized careers and normal, practical situations, high school math classes are designed to endow students with the ability to exercise deductive reasoning and clear, independent thinking, making them better all-around persons.

SOCIAL SCIENCE

"Shades of Napoleon Bonaparte! What's going on here?"

Stores of information from the early colonists to the 1960 election bring essential knowledge to students.

To make students better understand and appreciate their country, flag, and freedom; U.S. History and World History present the trials and tribulations of others who have worked to make them what they are today. Government gives pupils a more-than-basic understanding of local, state, and federal governments. It also shows them what part they must play to keep up their great American heritage.

Through current magazines and educational movies, students also keep up with the world today. The Social Science classes help make the well-rounded citizens of tomorrow.

Patriotism is deepened by knowledge of the history and government of the nation.

Mr. Richard Crandall

Business today is not what it was in Grandma's day. Employers and employees alike must be skilled in the work they do every day. Basic skills are important in whatever profession one might pursue. The commercial classes provide this knowledge. At the same time they instill in students the ever-important drive to continue learning as the opportunities present themselves.

Office supplies, machines, figures—these seem to receive the greatest emphasis in the commercial classes. Shorthand, transcription, bookkeeping, record keeping, office practice and typing classes help students master basic skills as well as polish up on the techniques learned during grade school.

From baby clothes . . . . .

"Wonderfullest days!"

Delicious aromas and enticing, taste-awakening fragrances mingle through the halls to lure the student body to Room One, the home economics department of Ludington High School.

Cookies, cakes, pies, and even full-course meals are only a beginning to the accomplishments taught each girl. Home economics I and II provide students with a good background in domestic abilities for those who plan to make careers as homemakers.

Future wives, mothers, nurses, dieticians and health workers learn proper etiquette, room planning, family management, baby care, nutritious cooking, and various sewing skills in the line of gifts and practical clothing. With the excellent facilities and programs provided for the home economics students, L.H.S. should turn out a fine "batch" of future homemakers and health workers.

Christy Johnson and Jean Gillette model the results of their sewing skills.

CHOIR

"And the 'halls' shall be filled with the sound of music . . . ."

Enjoyable is the chief characteristic of the choir hour in L.H.S. Under the direction of Mr. Irving Prescott, the students practice daily for concerts and programs.

Each year the choir sponsors a barrage of dances, concerts, suppers, car washes and baked goods sales to earn money for their annual trip to Chicago. While in Chicago the choir makes their now traditional appearances in the Chicago Temple and the Lockwood Church, along with enjoying the sight-seeing and hit plays.

Reviving an old practice, the L.H.S. choir and the Cadillac High School choir exchanged concerts this year. The two choirs performed together in assemblies in both high schools.

Also under the activities of the choir this year was the sponsoring of the Allegro American Ballet. This was rather a service given to the community, and greatly appreciated by many Ludington citizens.

Choir members prepare for a concert.

"Everybody cheer for 'that dear old flag of orange and black!'"

Behind the fine concerts and excellent performances in contests and marching events lie hours of tedious practice. Each band rehearses one class-hour a day plus at any special rehearsals that may be called.

Both bands compete in various contests throughout the year, give concerts, and participate in a marching program which includes parades at the home football games, Memorial Day, Fourth of July, and the Scottville Harvest Festival.

The individual is spurred to take his practice time seriously by the tryouts and challenging periods which are held each year. Individuals are also encouraged to take part in the annual district solo and ensemble contest.

The baton beats may seem like lashes, or the drum major's whistle may be confusing, but when the passages are smoothed, the solos perfected, and the left foot distinguished from the right, the end result satisfies the effort.

DRIVER education

Every day thousands of people are represented by pins stuck in a traffic map at police headquarters—pins marking the place they died—or where their automobiles were damaged in accidents. You may never see one of these maps, but if you're not careful you may be represented there one of these days.

Through careful instructions and actual on-the-spot practice, the drivers' training course strives to make the drivers of tomorrow better than those of today. Since poor attitudes and carelessness toward driving causes more accidents than does lack of skill, Mr. Greiner and Mr. Sholtey try to leave the student with a clear understanding of what constitutes good attitude. Students learn proper care and parts of the car, so that it can be kept in good condition at all times.

Keep your face off the map pins. Drive carefully—the life you save may be your own.

Any problem receives the full attention of the counselors.

counselors

First hour finds Mr. Aho hard at work.

Seniors have problems; freshmen have problems; everyone has problems. To handle this raft of problems L.H.S. has three harried, concerned, competent counselors. The counselors handle everything from personal situations to schedule conflicts to questions concerning college.

The student first becomes acquainted with counselling services when he is preparing for his freshman year: deciding on his course of study, majors and minors, other details. During his next two years there is little contact with the counselors unless special problems arise.

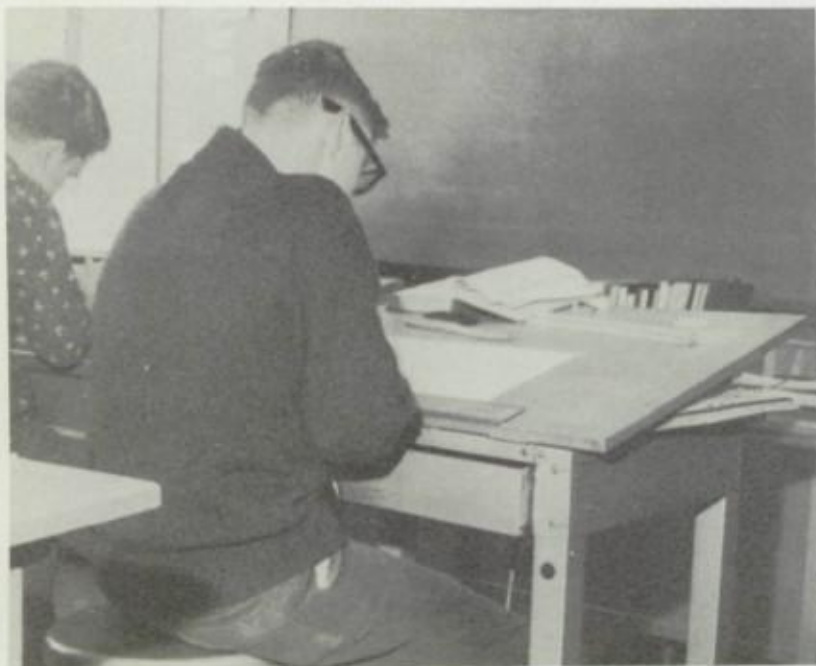

His senior year, however, is filled with decisions revolving about college, the armed forces, other vocations—decisions which will shape his entire life. The experience and knowledge of the counselors aid with all these decisions.

Agriculture classes rejuvenated this ancient farm relic.

Agriculture students become efficient in parliamentary procedure.

Above the hum and whine of power tools, a visitor to the L.H.S. vocational area would find many varied areas of learning.

Printing and mechanical drawing classes firmly implant in the students the basic skills of these fields, then move on to more skilled and challenging work. Shop work includes learning to handle and care for tools and machines, common and special. After proper usage is learned, techniques of different skills are explored. Agriculture classes delve into farm life, machinery, crops, and other things in this line.

A student has many opportunities to prepare himself for a future in the vocational fields.

A program consisting of health, orientation, first-aid, and physical education is required of students in the freshman and sophomore classes. Under this program students compete in all sorts of activities, group and individual, which develop body co-ordination and alertness. The art of co-operation and following orders is also learned through everyday association.

Orientation and health classes help students to know more about themselves, their families, their school. First-aid classes prepare students to be calm and useful in any emergency.

Painting constitutes one part of art classes.

ART

Mr. John Markov

Baby food jars, compasses, paint rags—all these are objects that help to convert students into artists. Students enrolled in art classes and arts and crafts learn various art techniques and apply them in projects.

First-year art students study basic design, moving during the second year to more advanced stages, as fashion illustrations and landscape painting. Art III and IV are designed for those students who plan a vocation in art; their major parts are figure drawing, sculpturing, city planning, and specialization.

Art has sometimes been classified as one-tenth inspiration and nine-tenths hard work. Mr. Markov's students can certainly testify to this fact.

Ingrid finds sculpturing interesting.

custodians

Each L.H.S. custodian is a carpenter, locksmith, plumber, gardener, housekeeper, and whatever else a situation demands. These versatile men keep the high school in excellent condition all the year round.

A broken window, a balky furnace, or a misadjusted desk occasionally disrupt the daily routine of cleaning. Night custodians must often stop their work to lock and unlock doors for visitors. L.H.S. salutes its custodians, who are friendly and capable through all interruptions.

cooks

Ludington high's cafeteria cooks prepare food to serve over 500 people each day. They carefully plan menus which are alternated for variety, and they train the students who assist them during the two noon hours.

The catsup may disappear, or the hamburgers may seem to fly away in the middle of the rush, but no one goes hungry. L.H.S. students and faculty appreciate the kitchen staff's efforts in making enjoyable meals.

BUS DRIVERS

"As solid as the Rock of Gibraltar" marks the dependability of the L.H.S. bus drivers. Through all kinds of Michigan weather, the apprehensive, but efficient, bus drivers make their appointed rounds, sometimes to the dismay of the bus students.

Extra work for the drivers often appears in the form of out-of-town games, special club trips, and transportation for band students. Occasionally mechanical breakdowns present aggravating problems.

High school is push between classes, touchdown passes, cram exams, studies, buddies, straight pipes, classroom gripes, things to do, a point of view.

school

Listening, talking, thinking, walking, seeing, being . . . this is high school, this and more—

Teachers, books, labs, essay questions (make a stab), shades of doubt, turn about,
English themes, dramatic screams, softball teams, impossible schemes. . .

Studying is a bent back and hunched shoulders and sore eyes. It's loneliness. It's humility, it's arrogance, it's patience, it's push.

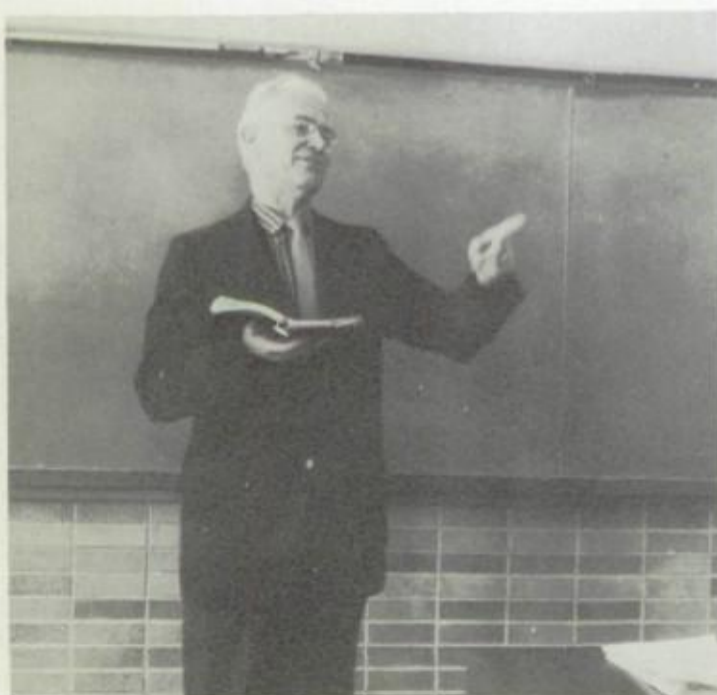

It's the grind.

It's a confusing quest, a phone call at eleven . . . it's procrastination followed by despair. . .

. . . hard work,
homework,
slow work,
no work . . .

. . . and sometimes — just sometimes — studying is something near joy, when the isolated bits suddenly stick together,
a pattern appears, understanding occurs.

I am a good Joe; I am an unfair, scheming slave-driver
. . . a teacher.

I am heartless. I am terribly understanding. I am a pushover.
I try to talk realistically and convince my students that I am genuinely interested in them. I make it clear I'll break their blooming necks if they don't work.

I am a stander-in-line (at the end), a signer of last name, first name, middle initial, a runner of errands, a "John's little brother?!" . . . a freshman.

Being a freshman is a little frightening, lots of fun . . . best of all it's exciting, it's unique . . . it's beginning.

I am a blob of being, nothing—a sophomore. No special task is mine, no name to call my own, save next-to-last-in-line.

I'm seasoning, aging in a brew of study, biding my time in the cocoon until next year—watch me then!

Junior is my title . . . junior servant for the senior, presenting the prom and homecoming . . .

. . . junior hopeful at the foreign exchange conference night, shaking in my dreams . . .

. . . junior proud of my shiny new ring, a status symbol (did I say mine?).

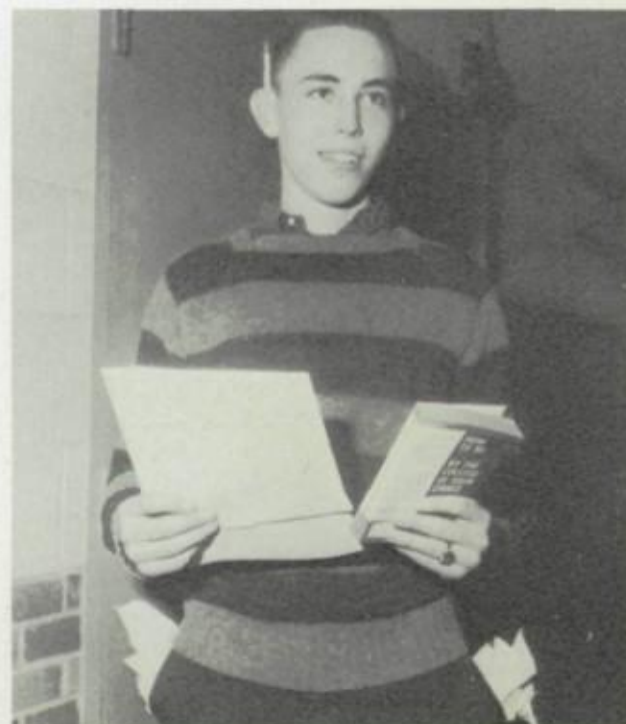

Please!

Address me as His Frivolous Eminence, One Wise Beyond Caring . . .

I walk with pigeons and puppies and popular girls . . .

I am the Taker of tests, the Filler of forms, the Responsible Citizen in the scheme, the Source of Frustration to the faculty . . .

I am witty, wise, sarcastic, not to be humbled . . . I get out in June . . . where am I going?

homecoming

Swirling, starry-eyed couples danced away the night to the "End of the Rainbow" at the 1961 Homecoming.

Lovely Queen Sheryl, in a flower-entwined swing with her court surrounding her on ivory benches, reigned over the dance. A multi-colored rainbow stretched to the ceiling and added enchantment to a perfect evening.

The dance climaxed a week filled with hard work and festivities, which included a rousing pep rally, a snake dance, and the parade Friday night led by the queen and her court.

The Senior Class "Rainbow" won first prize in the parade.

Winter

Whirl

They danced away the evening in the "Wonderland by Night."

But the thought of food made them mortals once more.

Snowflakes and dreamy music was the setting of the December 29, 1961 Winter Whirl. "Wonderland by Night" was the predominating theme of the Winter Whirl.

The Winter Whirl is the most important social function next to the yearly prom. Couples danced on crisp white snow and listened to the music of Charles Bird and his Orchestra.

In the center of the floor stood a quaint lamp post. A charming sleigh stood near by loaded down with many brightly colored presents.

Oriole Hall was decorated in snowflakes and feathery snow drifts. The stage held a Christmas tree. The orchestra sat on a stage backed up by white drifts of snow and a star filled sky.

foreign exchange

Mr. Leigh counsels junior hopeful Caryl Mercadal.

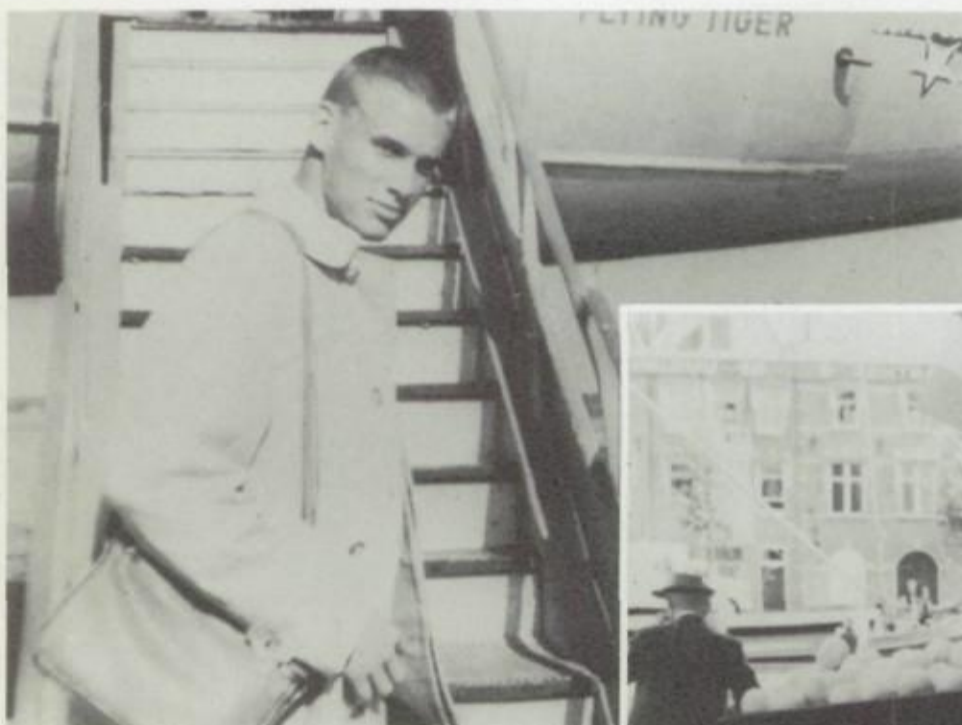

Luz Ruiz from Uruguay.

Ingrid Metzger from Germany.

The foreign-exchange program at L.H.S. has become of great importance to not only the student body, but to the community as a whole. This year the part of the foreign-exchange program consisting of choosing our students and financing their way has undergone great improvement, in such a way as to make it possible to send more students, on the average.

L.H.S. has had two students from foreign lands staying this year: Ingrid Metzger from Germany and Luz Ruiz from Uruguay. Through this program more people are able to gain a better understanding of the people and life in other lands and through this understanding world peace may more easily be achieved.

The first big steps of Daryl Peterson's journey to Finland.

senior play

"You may think I'm desperate, but would you kiss me?"

"Good Night Ladies," a farce in three acts, was presented by the Senior class on January first and second. Oriole Hall echoed with merriment and laughter as the Raleigh girls and their co-hosts tried earnestly to fool the near-sighted dean of women.

Complications arose when the Raleighs' aunts and prospective matrons of the proposed dormitory were delayed in their arrival. Jug Brown and Sam Raleigh were "chosen" as volunteers to portray the aunts in front of Dean Eggleby and Professor Dexter.

Further hilarity evolved around Professor Dexter's plans to propose to Aunt Flora.

The climax came as Dean Eggleby "caught them in the act." Fun, frolic and frivolity characterized "Good Night Ladies."

honor society

Kristy Okker lights the purple candle of scholarship.

The National Honor Society is devoted to recognition of superior leadership, character, service and scholastic ability. To become a member, a student must have and maintain a 3.25 average. He must show qualities of leadership and service in extra-curricular activities and classroom participation.

Each year the National Honor Society holds an assembly in which new members are appointed and the rules and regulations are reviewed.

The National Honor Society also sponsors various activities and promotes new educational ideas.

New initiates and their parents were honored at a gathering in the library.

pep Band

Who leads the snake dance?
Who livens up our pep assemblies?
Who helps buoy our school spirit at basketball games?
You're right—the pep band.

This year the band has been under the leadership of Bill Stahl. Although the band is not large in number, it is large in the effect it has on students concerning school spirit and pride.

cadet Band

Ludington High School Cadet Band has successfully completed its fourth year as an intermediate band, providing freshmen and sophomores with an opportunity for a wide range of musical experience before becoming members of the Varsity band.

The Cadet band has participated in various activities throughout the year, including football performances in the fall, concert season, the mass band performance at Big Rapids and the district band festival in Morley-Stanwood.

student council

Mayor Gary Haner opens the meeting.

"Exactly what do you think you're talking about?"

The Student Teacher Co-operative Commission of L.H.S. acts as the governing body. During frequently held meetings, topics of concern to the students are discussed and solutions are advanced. The group also handles assemblies for the year.

The commission is composed of a mayor, clerk, treasurer, prosecuting attorney, chief of police, four justices, three commissioners-at-large, and a commissioner representing each of the four classes in addition to members of the faculty and administration. Students are welcome to sit in on the meetings when they have a free period.

The Student Police work in co-operation with the Student Council. Their duties are to enforce the rules and issue tickets when needed. The Student Police work during the assemblies and devote time to the games and other events. To promote better sportsmanship and scholarship; acknowledge current school news and activities; create an increasing awareness of the value of education and induce a growing realization of the importance of the student in a changing world are the goals of the Oriole Life. The "voice of L.H.S." has always been not only a source of entertainment, but also a tool of education.

Staff members work diligently acquiring ads, writing stories, proofreading copy, writing headlines and, finally, distributing the finished papers to classrooms.

"Just another sleepless night" was often the wail of members of advanced journalism when special problems arose, such as a 44-page deadline to meet tomorrow, or five unwritten classroom stories, or the disappearing act of the ad book or the picture log. Often through the maze was also heard the cry of "somebody told me not to take this job!"

Much planning and hard work was demanded from the annual staff before the finished product could be ready for autographs and admiration. Writing and proofreading copy, collecting ads from businessmen and merchants, obtaining thousands of pictures of the correct size and character, pasting up, determining design and theme—these were just the beginning of all the tasks accomplished.

Amidst the rubber cement, blue pencils, and peculiar-type slide rules, staff members cried at disappointments and laughed at the tears, agreed about needed improvements and argued about the way to improve, all the while producing the book of memories held by the reader.

"The glory that was Greece and the grandeur that was Rome" come alive again with chariots, banquets, togas and slave auctions. These activities in Junior Classical League help Latin students, past and present, to better understand the civilization, art, language, and literature of the Roman people.

Saturnalia, celebrated in December, brings to life the ancient festival of Saturn, which was a time of general feasting and merrymaking. A slave auction, resembling those commonly held in Rome centuries ago, with chariots, street processions, and the actual auctioning, welcomes new initiates into J.C.L. each fall. Various pageants and plays presented at the regular meetings help members to see how the present civilization parallels the ancient one.

In typical Roman style, a spring banquet is the main highlight of the year. Complete with white togas, spring flowers, fruits, and nuts, the members enjoy a feast "fit for the gods."

A comparatively new club, Future Farmers of America, is certainly one of the most rewarding and active. The club is a non-profit, non-political, non-sectarian group, open to all boys studying vocational agriculture. In the past year the club sponsored such things as a Thanksgiving basket, a party for underprivileged children, the basket-brawl game, and the annual Winter Whirl, as well as selling candy for the March of Dimes.

The club stands for the all-around development of its members—spirit, mind and body. Each member should gain something from membership, as well as being of service in the club's different programs.

thespians

Thespian Troupe 1158 of Ludington High School is specifically based on the theatrical and dramatic abilities or backstage work of the students.

In order to become a member the student must earn ten points by participating in a dramatic event such as the all-school play or the senior play.

This year Thespians presented the all-school play, "Headin' for a Weddin'," and helped to present the senior play, "Good Night Ladies."

In the spring as an annual event the club sponsors a banquet at which new members are initiated and awards are presented. The honor of being a Thespian comes after much hard work and provides the student with a life-time membership in the national organization.

COURT

"How do you plead—guilty or not guilty?" To strengthen the student police enforcement of school regulations and policies, ticketed offenders are brought before the student court. The court is composed of four justices, a clerk, and a prosecuting attorney, who are all elected by the student body.

The justices hear the case and pass judgment. Sentences were changed slightly during the past year in order to make the court system more effective. As similar courts tried in other schools have usually been proven ineffective, L.H.S. students should be especially proud that they can govern themselves in such a manner.

Miss Utz has made the Future Teachers one of the strongest clubs in L.H.S. The purpose of this club is to encourage young students in the teaching profession.

The most valuable program of Future Teachers is the cadet teaching program they have incorporated. Under this plan, members assume the responsibility of teaching an elementary class for one hour a day. Thus the future teacher gains experience while deciding whether he should go into the field of education.

The Future Teachers also have a chance to visit and talk with the student teachers sent from colleges and hear and see guest speakers and films on teaching techniques and qualifications of a good teacher. The F.T.A. always keeps in mind the importance of the educating system of our future years to come.

Mr. Wells told of his experiences as a missionary in China.

"Educate in Christ" is the motto of these busy students, who are striving to fulfill the commandments of God. Members of the Youth For Christ Club feel that it is "essential for Christian youth to have an activity revolving around their faiths and beliefs within the school system."

Held during fifth-hour noon each Friday, the meetings range anywhere from skits to public speakers, involving a variety of subjects. The main purpose of the club, other than to provide Christian fellowship, is to work toward understanding the beliefs of all Christian sects, as well as to find their places in God's world.

Checking out books is one of the librarians' many tasks.

The L. H. S. Library Club, which plays an active part in a student's life, is a member of the Student Library Association of Michigan. Its most important duty is to promote greater knowledge of library functions.

The members of this club work in the library for one period each day and learn to run the library by checking out books, shelving them, and mending torn volumes. Each librarian is always willing to help a fellow student learn the placement of books and reference materials.

One of the largest organizations is the Pep Club. Each year this club supports our teams and coaches. The key word of the Pep Club is "sportsmanship." The members not only use this word—they live it.

Pep Club has promoted the sending of busses to many of the away games which accounts for the fact that our teams usually have an excellent cheering section. The Pep Club also should receive recognition for the posters which are put in the lobby each week before the games.

Pep Club aids its financial status by the selling of programs at basketball games and sponsoring after-game dances plus many projects which are undertaken during the year. Mr. Gordon Aho is the current sponsor of Pep Club.

L.H.S. baseball team, under the fine coaching of Mr. Terry Mack, captured two out of a possible three league titles. The two leagues that the Orioles captured their titles in were: The Babe Ruth league which consisted of teams from around town, and the West Shore league which was the regular high school league consisting of high school teams in this area. The other league in which they participated was the American Legion Tournament which was held in Midland. Tournament play was open to any high school team in the state.

Next year's team will be the same with the exception of two regular members who have graduated; therefore, the team could be another strong title contender.

Although much praise is given to the squad, not enough credit can be given to the coaching staff which assisted head coach Harvey Rottman and reserve coach Joe Kowatch. With such a fine coaching staff, Ludington is sure to have many successful seasons in the future.

The morning session was held in the gym with many students participating in the general discussion. During the afternoon they divided into predetermined groups for discussion on specialized topics.

Jim Strabel and Chuck Hoogerland took 1 1/2 points in the second round, while Ted Winkel and Mike Irvin were good for one. Jim Beckstrom pulled one in the second, and Dan Demlow made points in the first and second. He continued on all the way to the semi-finals before he was defeated by Phil Campbell, last year's state champion from Cadillac.

Many of the players will be back next year, and we look forward to many more successful seasons.

"Headin' For A Weddin'" cast lines up for a bow after a job well done.

Backstage, busy stagehands finish up last minute details before opening night.

Like the Senior Play, this year's All School Play was about "hillbillies."

It tells of a newspaper romance and a U.S. Mail correspondence courtship. Humor is wound around the invented ideas of a poor, wistful farmboy.

The play gave everyone a chance to meet the upcoming talented students in the school, and again was a tremendous success. "Headin' for a Weddin'" was truly a spring highlight!

mothers tea

"Prom Dresses Through the Years" marked the featured theme of the 1962 Mother's Tea. Many girls modeled flowing dance gowns while Sharon Huizinga narrated. Fine weather permitted the use of the courtyard as a back drop. Other entertainment was given by a sextet, composed of choir girls, and a solo by Laurel Huizinga.

Punch and cookies were served following the program by Tri-Hi-Y officers. Flowers and a large WELCOME MOTHERS sign decorated the cafeteria.

A Salute!

186 Seniors graduated on June 7, 1962 . . . thus marking the end of twelve years of study and growth. Now they approach the threshold of adulthood — facing the future with uncertainty and apprehension — but the fine record of their class will follow them always, and guide them far into the worlds of industry, agriculture, and homemaking. They will succeed!

Tom;

I think that you are just about the nicest guy ever.

In fact I don't think that your personality can be matched. You know how to treat
people exactly right.
I hope that you can get your days and hours
figgured out all right.
Keep proving that I was right about school.
